Fourth Plinth, Trafalgar Square

A recreation of a sculpture destroyed by so-called Islamic State (IS) is displayed in Trafalgar Square.

The Invisible Enemy Should Not Exist by Michael Rakowitz.

For the Fourth Plinth the artist has recreated the Lamassu, a winged bull and protective god that stood at the entrance to Nergal Gate of Nineveh from 700BC.

In 2015 it was destroyed by so-called IS along with other artefacts in Mosul Museum.

It has been made out of empty Iraqi date syrup cans, representative of a once-renowned industry decimated by the Iraq wars.
